ABSTRACT

An IC chip having a protective structure that is distributed over the semiconductor chip in such a manner that it is not possible to trigger a malfunction in the circuit by means of irradiation without the protective structure also being affected by the irradiation. To this end, redundant conductors are provided or connections having radiation-dependent conductivity or dielectric constant are provided or the test lines of a memory are arranged between the bit lines.